The Virgin of Flames by Chris Abani - Goodreads

You may not be familiar with the people in Chris Abani's The Virgin of Flames, but they are the sort of personalities you would love to gossip about. Instead of figuring what this novel is all about, you may be better off marveling at the oddities of the characters. The novel follows its protagonist, Black, around Los Angeles as he tries to come to terms with his hauntingly ugly childhood through his art.

This novel by Chris Abani is the literary equivalent of a Diane Arbus photograph—unsettling, terrible, grotesque, yet artistic. In the strange underbelly of the City of Angels Abani finds a kind of hope that describes something in human nature.

The Virgin of Flames by Chris Abani - PopMatters

Though Chris Abani is a foreigner by birth, he has artfully exposed Los Angeles' heart of darkness in The Virgin of Flames, the follow-up to his acclaimed debut, Graceland, which was a Today Book Club pick, a Hemingway/PEN Prize winner and a selection of the Los Angeles Times' Best Books of 2004. For most of its length, the Los Angeles River is an ugly scar carved by silt, sludge and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Chris Abani's novel The Virgin of Flames, is, unusually for an African writer set exclusively in East LA. As with his tour-de-force Graceland, Abani's language in The Virgin of Flames is poetic, but retains a succinct approach to description akin to Saul Bellow or Walter Mosley.

The Virgin of Flames Chris Abani is a force of nature. In the world of letters he is a luminous shattering talent, and The Virgin of Flames is his strangest and wildest trip yet. I don't think there's ever been a protagonist quite like Black, or an LA quite like this one.
